

Medical communication

Edited by: János Pilling

Medicina Publishing House • Budapest, 2011

Contents

Foreword (János Pilling)	9
General communication theory	11
Communication concepts and the role of communication in medicine (Erzsébet Németh)	12
General aspects of patient-doctor communication	41
The doctor-patient consultation (János Pilling)	42
Communication issues in patient information (István Tiringér, József Varga)	62
Therapeutic patient education and joint decision-making (Márta Csabai, Csilla Trinn, Péter Molnár)	90
The role of persuasive communication in medicine (Erzsébet Németh)	111
The significance of suggestion in doctor-patient communication (Katalin Varga, Csaba Diószeghy)	139
Communication with patients in specific situations	155
Communication with acute patients (Csaba Diószeghy, Katalin Varga)	156
Communication with sick children (Andrea Békési)	165
Communication with older patients (Győző Pék)	185
Communication with somatizing patients (János Pilling, Zoltán Cserháti)	198
Communication with alcohol- and drug-dependent patients (Zsolt Demetrovics, Miklós Péter Kalapos)	214
Communication about sexual problems (Vilmos Szilágyi)	238
Doctor-patient communication following attempted suicide (Péter Osváth, Sándor Fekete)	255
Prevention and management of violence (János Pilling)	273
Breaking bad news (János Pilling)	285
Telemedicine (Ferenc Túry, Gábor Vincze, Bertalan Meskó)	310
Annex	327
Communication glossary	328