

Zoltán Simon

The Double-Edged Sword:
The Technological Sublime in American Novels between 1900 and 1940

AKADÉMIAI KIADÓ, BUDAPEST

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	7
CHAPTER I. The Technological Sublime: An Introduction	8
A Sublime Encounter with Technology	8
The American Technological Sublime: The Historical Context	9
Technology and Literature	13
Basic Terms of My Inquiry	14
Earlier Scholarship in the American Technological Sublime	18
A Roadmap to the Subsequent Chapters	29
CHAPTER II. The Sublime of Production and the Production of the Sublime	31
Factories and the Technological Sublime	31
The Sublime of the Factory in Literature	33
The Jungle : An Exposition of the Rhetoric of the Technological Sublime	36
Sherwood Anderson's Commentary on Production and Reproduction	39
CHAPTER III. The Sublime of Destruction: World War I and the Military Machine	47
The Emergence of the Military Machine	47
The Sublime Technology of Destruction in World War I	50
Technology in Dos Passos's Early Novels	51
The Technological Sublime after WWI—Another Casualty of War?	60
CHAPTER IV. The Sublime of (Auto)Mobility	61
The Automobile as the Ultimate Sublime Machine of the Twentieth Century ...	61
Sinclair Lewis as a Social Historian of American Automobility	63
Dos Passos's Manhattan Transfer and "Technophobic Modernism"	68
The Great Gatsby as Auto-Biography	70
Steinbeck's Promise of Redemption for Technology	74
CHAPTER V. The Sublime of Aviation: The "Winged Gospel"	80
The Aviation Sublime from Kitty Hawk to The Trail of the Hawk	80
Beyond World War I: The Apogee of the Sublime of Aviation	87
Faulkner's Pylon : The "Wastelanding" of the Sublime of Aviation	90
The Fading Away of the Aviation Sublime	99
CHAPTER VI. The Demise of the American Technological Sublime	102
Bibliography	109